14 Colonoscopic Surveillance and Burglar Alarms

by David B. Sachar

Dr. Sachar writes “Simply this: I have installed an electronic surveillance system to protect my home; I recommend a regular colonoscopic surveillance program to protect my patients while I wait for something better to come along.”

23 Safety Issues of Probiotic Ingestion

by Eric I. Benchimol and David R. Mack

The authors write that “some probiotics have certain proven benefits and specific strains should always be discussed, much the same as specific antibiotics are discussed.”

40 Conflicts Between the Leadership of Professional Societies in Gastroenterology and Big Pharma

by David Y. Graham

Doctor Graham poses questions about the relationship between Pharmaceutical Companies and physicians and presents some thoughts on how they can work together without compromising that relationship.

(continued on page 8)
A SPECIAL ARTICLE

46 Photodynamic Therapy: An Emerging Treatment for GI Neoplasia
by S. Patel, B. Katanyutanon and J. Levey
The authors write that photodynamic therapy (PDT) is a safe and effective way to ablate neoplastic tissue within the gastrointestinal tract and elsewhere in the body.

NUTRITION ISSUES IN GASTROENTEROLOGY, SERIES #33

63 Ostomies and Fistulas: A Collaborative Approach
by Kate Willcutts, Katie Scarano and Carolyn W. Eddins
Management of ostomies, especially those with fistulas can be very difficult. This article discusses both nutritional therapy and the skin care of patients with ostomies and fistulas.

A CASE REPORT

80 A Case of Juvenile Polyposis Coli
by Tom Shahwan, Nora Dajani, Julius P. Bonelo, Danuta I. Dynda and John B. Nixon
Juvenile Polyposis Syndrome (JPS) is a rare syndrome associated with an increased risk of GI malignancies and it is necessary to distinguish it from sporadic juvenile polyps which are usually benign. This is a case of Juvenile Polyposis Coli which was correctly diagnosed and successfully treated.

FELLOWS’ CORNER

84 by Eric Ibegbu
A case for you to solve.

(continued on page 12)
Book Reviews

From the Literature

Murray H. Cohen, D.O., editor of “From the Literature” reviews papers in gastroenterology that readers may have missed.

From the Pediatric Gastroenterology Literature

by John F. Pohl, M.D.

Guidelines for Authors

How to prepare articles for Practical Gastroenterology.

Medical Bulletin Board

News items of interest to the nation’s gastroenterologists.

Meetings Calendar

Meetings, events, courses, symposia, and their contacts.

Reader Request Fax Form

Readers may obtain additional information about products and services that appear in Practical Gastroenterology.